

Brenda Cassidy

Brenda has learned many lessons on the long road to finding herself, one of the greatest of which has been that we need to love ourselves and take the time to do the things we are passionate about. It's never too late to accomplish a goal, or to think of new ones. Brenda has always been passionate about writing. It was one of the things she had put off for a long time but has now brought some of her ideas to life, and being able to share them with others was one of her lifetime goals. Brenda also works as a freelance editor, and gains a sense of accomplishment and satisfaction from knowing that she is helping others to get their books out there. She has three sons, two stepsons, and six grandchildren. "Life is short, and some of us don't fully realize how true this is until much later on in our lives, so do what you can to enjoy your life now, and live it to the fullest."